This project involves the installation of historic lighting and the burying of all utilities underground. On sand dredging, he stated that this fall and winter the town will work with the Army Corps of Engineers as they dredge the Merrimack River and the Piscataqua River. The goal is for 150,000 cubic yards of sand to be deposited near shore to help build up the beach sand. The state will pay for 75% of the project and the town will pay 25% or $200,000. He said the town is working to reestablish better relations with DCR to ensure that monies keep flowing and that when monies are available for projects that Salisbury gets a fair share. He stated that the state is receiving $5 billion from the federal government and that the town will lobby officials to help fight climate change and assist in coastal resiliency. He said that UNH professor Greg Moore of the Coastal Habitat Restoration

Project had some of his students help plant beach grass in the dunes. He stated that the DCR Regional Sediment Project led by John Ramsey concluded that Salisbury beach needs a 15-foot berm that goes 2 miles at a cost of $4,000,000. This was recommended by DCR in the study.

Wayne Capolupo was recognized to speak and he said that he had grave reservations about sand from the Piscataqua River being used as it is not the same quality of beach sand that we have here. He urged that we should make sure that the sand is dumped far enough off shore. He concluded by thanking the SBBA for doing all that the group does.
